School board accepts T.M.'s reduced budget

by Arlene Surprenant

Beginning February 24, Wilmington School Committee members will be preparing a 1993 school budget which will be $200,000 less than the current budget. After extensive deliberation last week, board members voted five to two to go along with the town manager's bottom line figure of $12.1 million. They directed Supt. William Fay to bring in a budget reflecting that number.

Not everyone was happy with the move to reduce the current $12.3 million budget. Fay said he wasn't satisfied with the town manager's recommendation.

"We just can't keep going backwards in dollar amounts when our system is, in fact, growing," he said.

"It's frightening to think what we have to do to run the system on $12.1 million," noted John DeMarco. According to Committeeman Bob Peterson, the only place left to cut would be in the salary account, which makes up $10.2 million of the present budget.

Phil Fenton said he opposed the manager's figure. He urged members to let the superintendent bring forward a "sound" budget, one that wouldn't put "a pressure point on our children's education."

While the committee agreed with Fay that they were obliged to do the best possible job of educating students, they wondered aloud where the money would come from to do the job.

"We cannot spend what the town does not have," said Peggy Kane, adding, "No one has given me any indication of where there's anymore money."

Chairman Aldo Caira pointed out while all committee members were doing their best for Wilmington youngsters, "we have to (also) think what's in the best interest of the community."

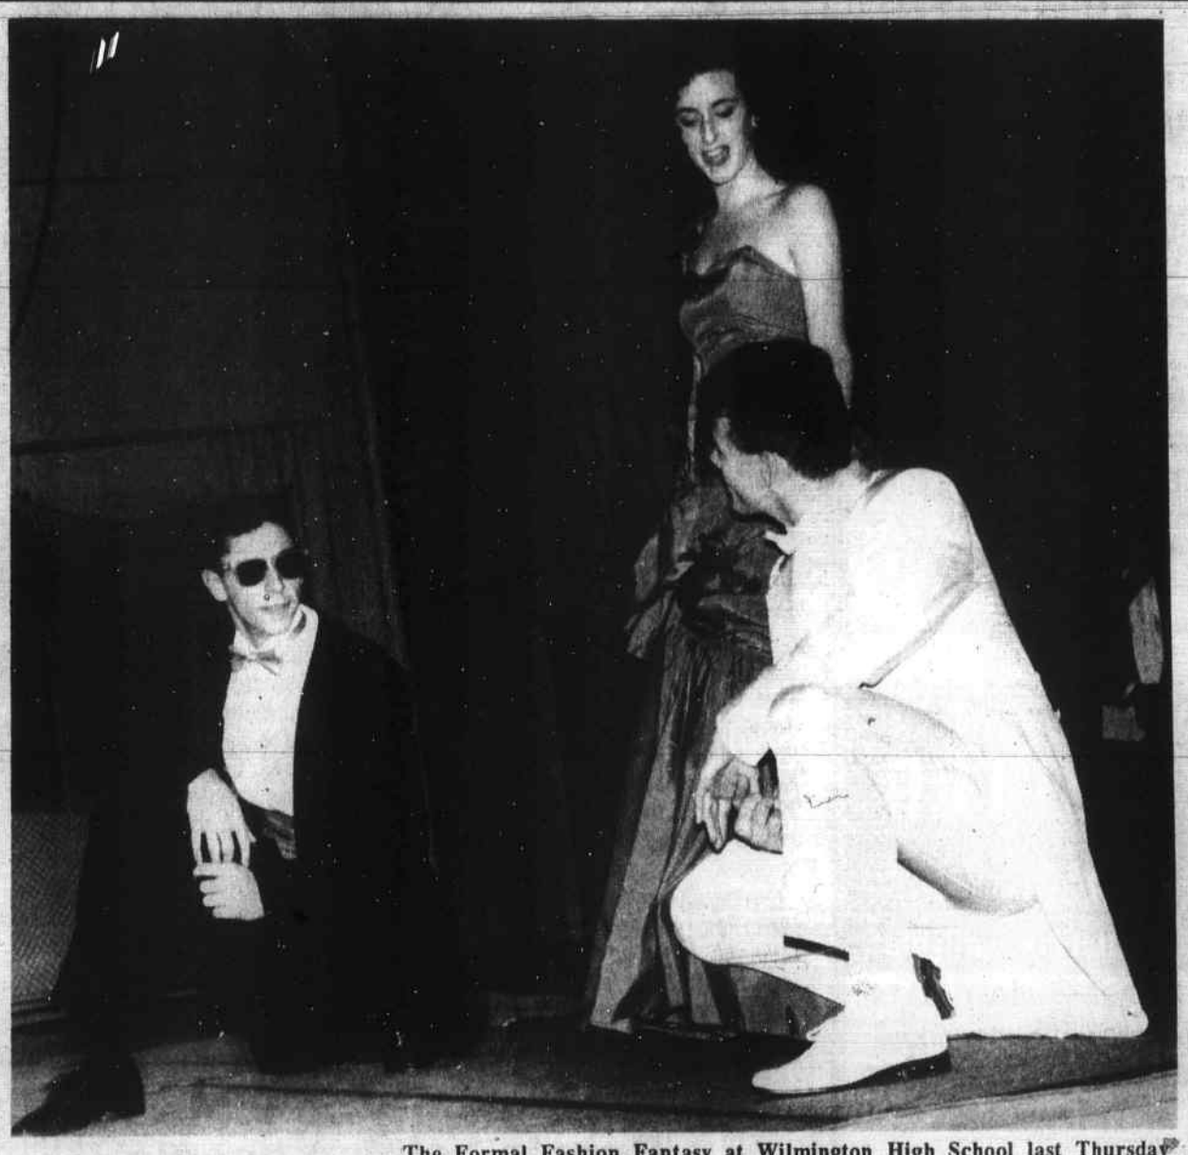

Fay has yet to present his own budget recommendation to the board. However, he told committeemen he was projecting increases in the collective bargaining area, additional personnel to keep class sizes down, and in the textbook account to replace outdated books. Some members seemed stunned by the news. They called for a more realistic budget in keeping with the town's fiscal situation.

"I for one will not support additional personnel," said Peterson. Dr. Shirley Callan agreed. She also expressed "dismay" over the delay in beginning the budget process. She reminded the board she had asked Fay to bring his budget to the committee that week so they could begin budget talks and have a final document to the finance committee March 19 for review. Peterson told Fay he would like his proposed budget by the end of last week. After the vote to go with a $12.1 million bottom line, Fay said he needed more time to change his proposal and could present it to the board on Monday, February 24.

Part of the delay in presenting the budget stemmed from the hope that the state would move quickly and pass the new education reform bill thus assuring that Wilmington would get extra funds for next year. While hopes are still high the educational package will pass, that hasn't happened as yet.

Aldo Caira suggested preparing two budgets, one along the town manager's recommendation and one reflecting the system's actual needs. He said if Wilmington receives extra funds they can be incorporated at a later date. He cautioned, however, against giving "false hope."

Most committeemen recognized that any cuts will most likely come in the salary account. Both John Wood, head of the Wilmington Teachers' Association, and Business Manager Peter DeRoeve agree that for every $300,000 reduction, approximately 10 teachers would be laid off. With $200,000 cut right at the outset, that works out to seven or eight teachers immediately laid off. In addition, said Wood, the payroll will be going up $500,000 to fund the teacher's five percent salary increase which was negotiated last year. A total of 25 to 30 teachers could face layoffs in the year ahead, said Wood. DeRoeve explained there is still $532,636 which was deferred to this year. Payment of that money, he said, could be deferred for yet another year.

Fashion Fantasy

The Formal Fashion Fantasy at Wilmington High School last Thursday night was a fun event for all involved. Kerri Devine steps out on the runway, with Chris Armata and John McCabe on either side. Karen Armata, Chris' mother, put the show together.

Business as usual at E.C. Whitney

E.C. Whitney & Sons on Woburn Street, Wilmington is back in full operation as of Wednesday morning. The barrel firm has lost no time in getting back to business, and has been able to take care of every customer since the fire which occurred at 10 p.m. last Friday.

The fire was in the area where employees have their lunchroom. It was detected by Reading Municipal Light Department employees, who were searching the area looking for an electrical problem which had shut off electricity to the area.

Wilmington, Reading and Woburn fire departments responded, along with Wilmington police.

"It was gratifying," said Ed Whitney, president of the firm, "to know you have people like that!"

While the fire started in the eating area, it did spread to other areas of the building, one of several on the two and a half acres owned by the firm. Most of the damage was in areas where plywood had been used for separation.

"No more plywood will be used in this building again" said Whitney.

The firm had a major fire five years ago, on Feb. 23, 1987, after which the present building was erected.

The firm has 10 employees, all local. Every one of them worked over the weekend to restore the operating abilities of the company. The business was started in 1875 by the grandfather of the present owner, and Whitney says "my sons will be the fourth generation!"

"Recycling is the name of the game" he says. The firm recycles plastic and steel barrels. Plastic barrels are shredded, while steel ones are painted and resold, when possible. It is a "very sophisticated business."

Housing Partnership sponsors two articles

by Arlene Surprenant

The Wilmington Housing Partnership (WHP) will be bringing two articles forward at April's town meeting. At last Thursday's meeting, the board reviewed the draft articles and tightened up some of the language.

One of the articles asks voters to allow the WHP to build affordable homes on five parcels of town-owned land. After much discussion, members decided to build all single family homes on the sites rather than duplexes or triplexes in order to be consistent with area neighborhoods and forestall possible complaints from abuttors.

The largest site under consideration is a 10-acre parcel near the Wildwood School pedway with access off Federal Street. Health Director Greg Erickson estimates that, utilizing septic systems, approximately 10 to 15 homes could be built on the site. WHP members preferred a mix of affordable and market rate homes on the property. The second largest site is on Avon Street by Aldrich Road. Members estimated five homes could be built on two separate sites. Three of the homes would be built on existing lots while two would be built on a 30,000 square foot subdivided lot needing board of appeals approval. Again they preferred a mix of affordable and market rate units.

The board is also looking to construct two single family homes with a shared driveway on Denault Drive, three homes on three lots on Bates Avenue near Virginia Road, and one home on Lynch Lane off Glen Road.

For the second time, the WHP is sponsoring an article to allow for the creation of accessory apartments in Wilmington. A similar article was brought to voters in 1988 where it was reportedly defeated by one vote.

According to the draft bylaw, accessory apartments would be allowed in R10, 20, 60 and neighborhood business zones in homes existing prior to January 1,1992. Homeowners would have to conform to certain conditions such as putting no more than two bedrooms in an apartment and having a minimum floor area of 750 square feet and a maximum area of 1,250 square feet. Currently, there is a bylaw that pertains to dwelling conversions but WHP members said that law is so restrictive it's not really used.

Members on Thursday incorporated some changes suggested by the planning board and the League of Women Voters. They agreed to the necessity of having one additional parking space for the apartment and allowing exterior stairways to an apartment if the stairway is not visible from the street. They also eliminated a 10 percent cap on accessory apartments in town because the LVW felt this figure would mislead residents. Odette Kent of the LVW and the partnership noted the league felt people would get confused with the state's 10 percent requirement of affordable housing stock in town and end up with the feeling that all of the apartments would count toward the state requirement. She suggested a lower figure be written into the bylaw. Members opposed her suggestion and opted to eliminate an "arbitrary" cap altogether. Planning - Conservation Director Lynn Duncan stressed that the town would never reach the 10 percent figure anyway because of restrictions such as Title V Septic regulations, so residents don't have to fear too many apartments would be created in town.

"The truth is we're not going to reach 10 percent and we're not going to reach five percent," she said.

During the discussion other changes were made to the draft bylaw. These included the deletion of a section allowing apartments in detached units such as garages and barns.

Partnership members stressed they are sponsoring the article to allow the creation of more diverse housing types in town. By their nature, said members, apartments will likely be kept affordable. Bob DiPalma predicted people will be more accepting of this type of housing at this town meeting since there's "a whole different climate" in the affordable housing picture today.

Rezoning, land sales on April agenda

by Arlene Surprenant

The sale of town land and the rezoning of private property will occupy voters at the April 25 town meeting judging from the 10 articles submitted by local petitioners. The deadline for petition articles was last Friday. Any articles sponsored by town boards or by residents who missed the February 14 deadline will have to now be submitted through the board of selectmen.

Four rezoning articles will be on the Wilmington warrant. Developer Kevin MacDonald is seeking to rezone a 4.85 acre parcel by Andover Street from R60 to R20. Al and Diane Fielding also want to amend the zoning bylaws to rezone a parcel off Hopkins Street from R60 to R20. Attorney Bob Peterson is asking to rezone two parcels southerly by Lowell Street from R20 to High Density Business.

Petitioners are seeking to purchase seven parcels of surplus town land in five areas of town. The lots are located on Andrew Street off Aldrich Road, on Gorham Street off Glen Road, on Lynch Lane off Glen Road, on West Jamaica Avenue off Faulkner Avenue, and on Morningside Drive off Cunningham Street. If the articles are approved, the lots will have to go out to bid to all interested parties as spelled out in new state regulations.

There will be a public hearing on all warrant articles on Tuesday, March 24 at the town hall auditorium.

School reopening August 31?

by Arlene Surprenant

Wilmington students could be going back to school next fall as early as August 31 if there's a consensus on the school committee to change the school calendar. Traditionally, local schools open the Wednesday after Labor Day. Since the holiday is late this year and falls on September 7, students would not be returning to school until September 9. This means they would not complete the school year until late in June.

Supt. William Fay told his board he needed feedback from them and parents on the possibility of changing the calendar to pick up a full week before the Labor Day holiday. Committeeman Phil Fenton suggested eliminating the February vacation because of its proximity to the Christmas holidays. Some, like Student School Committeeman Millie Cavanaugh, were against that idea.

"You need a break. You need every vacation you get," she said.

The board will discuss the issue at its next meeting February 26.

WHS Parents' meeting Feb.24

Parents of Wilmington High School freshmen and sophomores are invited to attend a brief meeting Monday, Feb. 24 from 7 to 8 p.m. in the school cafeteria.

The purpose of the meeting is to familiarize parents with the various guidance programs available to their children during the course of the next few years. In addition, parents will be given an overview of what will be expected of the college bound student with respect to the selection of courses related to college requirements for public and private schools, preliminary scholastic aptitude tests (PSATs), college admission tests, scholarships, financial aid, etc.

A question and answer period will follow the meeting.

Fay receives vote of confidence

by Arlene Surprenant

Wilmington School Superintendent William Fay got his vote of confidence from school unions.

Following some negative comments and poor ratings on his evaluation by some members of the local school committee, Fay said he would poll the unions to see if they would give him a vote of confidence on his job performance for the past three years. At last week's committee meeting, Fay said he received what he considered to be an "overwhelming" vote of confidence from his staff. According to the superintendent, 224 staff members supported him, 16 did not, and six said they had no opinion.

During the meeting, Fay read a sampling of unsolicited letters received from several people. A letter signed by all the directors noted that Fay "sets the tone for cooperative problem solving" and works in the best interest of the students in his care. Wilmington principals, among other things, pointed out the superintendent allows for differing points of view. One staff member said "I can't think of one element that is lacking in your leadership." Another thanked Fay for his support and noted he was building trust "where mistrust existed prior to your arrival."

Dr. Shirley Callan, who gave Fay all unsatisfactory marks on his evaluation, claimed it was "inappropriate" for Fay to seek support from school unions, especially when it was so close to contract negotiations with them. Fay urged the committee to put aside its differences and try to work together in the future. He acknowledged his own comments may have been strong at the last meeting then added, "as far as I'm concerned, the matter's over."

Community schools: 'People helping people'

In the midst of budget cuts, reduced services and bare bones education programs, one local community counters with good news. Wilmington Community Schools (WCS) will reintroduce its adult evening arts and education program this spring, offering a wide variety of upbeat classes reflecting today's trends.

Classes will focus on the areas of professional training, arts and crafts, health and fitness, family issues and more. "Being in a recession generates even more demand for community services such as these" indicates Karen DiGiovine, director of WCS and long time Wilmington resident.

"During tough times people sometimes have to learn to do for themselves the services they previously paid others to do. WCS is sensitive to these needs and so is offering a variety of useful hands-on courses. These include:

Residential real estate by Attorney Robert Peterson, a must for anyone considering buying or selling; basic automotive maintenance where some students can perform oil changes on their own vehicles, and learn to recognize trouble spots when purchasing a used vehicle; Sewing I for beginners; custom draperies will teach students to sew customized window treatments for a fraction of the cost of outside customizing; and there is a homeowner remodeling series which is still in the process of being finalized.

There will be a series of one night workshops with titles such as effective parenting, managing anxiety attacks, infertility and adoption and couples workshop. These family issues will be addressed by Donna Whipple, MA and Richard Kaufman, Lic. SW, co-directors of Psychotherapy Associates of North Reading. More highlights are contemporary politics, conducted by State Rep. Jim Miceli; CPR certification where certificates will be issued the night of class; weight management by a local registered dietitian; co-ed gym so students can enjoy the benefits of a great workout while actually having a great time; cake decorating with Irene Brennan; quilting; ceramics; tole painting; belly dancing and much more.

"It's people helping people, which I believe is indicative of the 90s. I feel fortunate to offer the services of so many talented professionals while keeping tuition lower than it's been in years" concludes Director DiGiovine. "I would ask that people not get discouraged if classes fill quickly or there is more than one class they would have liked to attend in the same time slot. I hope we will have an even larger offering in the fall - we've just begun."

You may register for classes on Monday evening, February 24 from 7 to 9 p.m. at Wilmington High School. Brochures of courses are available at the Wilmington Public Library, the Town Hall or the High School.

Kirk leaving WCTV for Atlanta

by Arlene Surprenant

Karen Kirk, general manager of Wilmington's cable station WCTV, will be leaving her job February 28 and moving to Atlanta, Georgia where she will join the staff of the Turner Broadcasting System.

Kirk said last week she will be working in the public relations department at TBS beginning March 11. Her new position will require writing and phone skills as well as sales techniques to sell other cable stations on TBS. Kirk will also be in charge of planning special events and in-house promotions at the studio.

"Though I'm nervous it should be alot of fun. I'll have alot more room to grow. Here in Wilmington I'm as high as I can go," Kirk said.

The manager said she sent in her resume to TBS a month ago and was hired by phone on the strength of her background and experience. WCTV officials are already seeking a replacement for Kirk through the Boston Globe. All of the applicants, so far, are very well qualified to fill her shoes, said Kirk.

Kirk stressed there will be no disruption of service to Wilmington viewers upon her departure. Rather, it is anticipated there will be a smooth transition of power.

"I don't think viwers will even know there's a change going on," said the manager.

Kirk has served in her present position at WCTV for 18 months. In that time, cable service has expanded locally and the staff of volunteers has grown. Courses, such as the recent video production classes, have been offered to interested residents and subscribers have been kept up to date on local programs through Kirk's weekly columns in this paper.

Kirk is perhaps proudest of her work on WCTV Week, a first for Wilmington which showcased the Swain School studio and recognized the many volunteers who make community-access TV possible. As a result of the week long celebration last fall, Channel 56 came on the air, several former volunteers returned to the fold, and new members were recruited. Another achievement which ranks high, in Kirk's estimation, is her successful struggle to bring professional status to the studio.

"I like the fact that we're a primary source of news," said Kirk referring, in part, to the decision to show the live broadcast of both the selectmen's and school committee meetings. Kirk can't resist adding that she also gets a "big kick" out of scooping the local news media, on occasion of course.

Planning board reviews subdivsions

by Arlene Surprenant

A four lot subdivision being proposed by developers Jay Tighe and James Banda was reviewed by the Wilmington Planning Board Tuesday night. The subdivision will be built near Lowell and Parker streets.

Tighe said the men plan to bring the existing Naples Road to Adams Street and put in a 40 foot cul de sac at the end of the road. He said this was the only "viable" access to the lots. The site is in an R20 zone and contains pre-existing lots. The builders said they would put in above ground utilities.

Planning Board Chairman Dick Longo cautioned the developers to minimize their list of variance requests.

"The smaller the list the easier it is to grant," said Longo.

The board also discussed Treasure Hill, another subdivision off Andover Street. Developer Kevin MacDonald was seeking to modify his 12 lot subdivision by substituting rockcurb for granite curbing and shortening the planned sidewalks. MacDonald said rockcurb is less costly than granite and stronger than the average concrete curb. He said he would rather bring the sidewalk along one side to the cul de sac and plant trees there for cosmetic reasons rather than bring it through the development as planned.

In a letter to the board Town Engineer Harold Gillam said, because of the slope of the road, he wouldn't consider it "prudent" to eliminate sidewalks on one side. He also suggested the board adhere to the granite curbing. Some members seemed to fear setting a precedent by allowing the modifications. The board agreed to continue the hearing to discuss the matter with Gillam.

It's YOUR Money

BY JOYCE BRISBOIS
Certified Public Accountant

YES, YOU DO WANT TO TRIM YOUR INCOME!

While no one wants to earn less money or have less,there are good reasons to trim the income that is reported to the government. You can legally save on federal income taxes, state income taxes and the Social Security bite, too.

If you are enrolled in a 401(k) or other such retirement plan, it's smart to contribute as much as you can.The money you put into this plan is not listed as income on your W-2, so it's not taxable. And if your employer matches your contribution, you're way ahead of the game.

Another nice feature: your reimbursement accounts at work. Sometimes called flexible spending plans, these accounts permit an employee to funnel part of a salary to pay for medical expenses or child care. Even if you don't use up every penny you've set aside (and therefore lose the excess), the tax savings usually are worthwhile. The child-care benefit is especially worthwhile if the taxpayer has only one child and expenses exceed the $2,400 allowed under tax credit rules.

Boutwell won't be reclaimed

by Arlene Surprenant

Despite growth at the Shawsheen School and the likelihood of an early childhood program in Wilmington, the school committee voted unanimously Wednesday not to reclaim the Boutwell School from the Baptist Church in 1992.

The board acted on the recommendation of Supt. William Fay. Fay said the school system wouldn't be utilizing the school this year and suggested the board make its own judgement on the need for opening another school on a year-to-year basis. Currently the school is home to the Abundant Life Christian School run by the local Baptist Church. In order to terminate the present lease, the town must notify church officials six months prior to the expiration of the agreement.

Fay said Wednesday's action does not rule out the possibility of taking back the school at a later date. He pointed to current space needs at the Shawsheen School with an additional 150 youngsters enrolled this year. Committeeman Bob Peterson said with all the new housing developments in town, especially by the Shawsheen, the board may have to consider redistricting in the near future.

Caira updates water and sewer commission

Town Manager Mike Caira was present at the meeting of the Wilmington & Sewer Commissioners last Thursday. He was both a spectator, and a participant.

Mike sat aside, silently, while the commissioners conducted their business, and then joined them at their table.

The commissioners, in one conversation had been discussing costs and alternatives for the sewer system with engineers Emile Hemway and Tom Jenkins. The principal point was a discussion for alternatives to the proposal for a sewer extension which had been defeated at the last town meeting.

Other ideas included, in some areas, a lot of pumping stations. This brought a remark from Commissioner Noel Baratta.

"Every time you add another pumping station you add another headache" he said, "hopefully, by the next meeting we might have a recommendation for the town manager."

The town manager voiced his thanks to the commissioners for the support they had given him, in the changes he is making in the management of the town government. "I feel very comfortable in making administrative moves - clearly we are on the same wavelength. There is no Sacred Cow here!"

He told the commissioners that DPW Superintendent Bob Palmer, who is now operating both the DPW and the water Department crews, will have the duty of checking bills for the water department. If he find something wrong he can consult with the commissioners.

Ever since the water department was first started, in 1926, the commissioners have been checking the bills.

"There is no need for making people who serve without pay do the work about the details of bookkeeping," Caira said.

A considerable time was spent in discussing the costs of the sewer bills from the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA). Commissioner Arthur Smith, chairman, has been an advocate of changing the Wilmington operation to a local one, as is done in some other communities. The commissioners, however, feel that there are problems in legality, and in legislative needs which may have to be faced.

A recent statement from the MWRA on expected costs to the communities in the area, for 1992 shows that many other communities will find their costs are to be higher than the Wilmington cost. Wilmington is shown as being up 39.9 percent in preliminary estimates.

Planners approve Koch expansion

by Arlene Surprenant

A proposed addition to the Koch Membrane facility at Eames and Main Streets, with a proposed increase of 80 parking spaces met with the approval of the Wilmington Planning Board Tuesday night. Planners praised the site plan saying it was complete and "well thought out."

Bernie Pacquin, a civil engineer with Dana Perkins, and Paul Conway, facility manager at Koch, said they were seeking to build a 43,238 square foot addition to the present building because Koch had recently acquired Romicon Inc. of Woburn. Reportedly, Koch Membrane will consolidate Romicon's marketing, customer service, and manufacturing operations into their Wilmington operation.

Pacquin said parking will increase from 231 to 311 spaces which should be adequate for the total facility. He said extra spaces will be added when the firm adds on a second story to the building. Since the site abuts an R20 residential zone, proponents plan to put in a landscaped buffer for privacy by the addition and the parking lot. The engineer added there will be a free flow of traffic around the area, a dumpster will be screened from sight, and a new sewer line will service the facility. Because the site is in a groundwater protection district, the town engineer has required three catch basins and oil traps for runoff.

"It's really nice to see a well thought out site plan," said Carole Hamilton. She said she especially was pleased that the plan shows long term construction plans that don't push planning board boundaries.

"We want to be good citizens," said Conway.

"In Pursuit of Excellence"

The third program in the series "In Pursuit of Excellence" will be broadcast live on WCTV, Channel 52, Tuesday, Feb. 25 at 7 p.m. The panelists will be John Rennie, chairman of the Mass. Business Alliance for Education, Superintendent William Fay, Rep. James Miceli and Sen. Robert Buell. They will present and discuss the new Education Reform Act.

Some of the proposal reforms are to eliminate tenure, change the way tax dollars are spent for education, initiate school based management, allocate incentive pay for schools and individual teachers, and redefine Proposition 2 1/2.

These and other sweeping changes in education are slated to be voted on this April. This goal of the February 25 "In Pursuit of Excellence" program is to help enhance public awareness of these timely issues.

Principal position posted

by Arlene Surprenant

The principal's position at the Woburn Street School is being posted both in and outside the school system following a six to one vote of the Wilmington School Committee. All except Chairman Aldo Caira went along with the motion at last Wednesday's school board meeting.

The school's principal, Dolores Silva, will be retiring at the end of this school year. For the second time, Supt. William Fay urged the board to advertise the position so there can be a smooth transition of power. Though he favored posting the position in-house because of the "outstanding candidates" in the system alone, a majority of the committee favored a more widespread search.

The search process is expected to be similar to that for principal at the Shawsheen School, said Fay. It will include PAC and parent involvement, immediate advertisement of the opening, the receipt of applications by a March deadline, interviews of successful candidates in April, and the hiring of a new principal in May.

MWRA sewer rates — why so high?

by George W. Allan

There has been a lot to complain about on the national scene this winter, pontificating politicians, a floundering economy and sky-rocketing health costs.

On the local level, one of everyone's favorite targets, the MWRA, is back in the headlines. The agency has announced an average rate hike of 36 percent. This is similar to recent increases and can be expected to continue for another five years. Wilmington's assessment will be $1,500,000 for fiscal year 1993. In fiscal year 1989, it was $390,000.

The town's assessment from the MWRA is made up of two charges. The first is for operation and maintenance of the treatment system and is based on the population connected to the sewer and is a function of volume and strength of the waste water. The second and largest component of the assessment is for debt service for the six billion dollar cleanup program. The charge is based on total population plus the strength of industrial discharges. Since Wilmington's entire population is not on the sewer system, it is being penalized under the present formula. The town has approximately 600 sewer customers, which is only about 12 percent of the total population. There is growing support with many of the suburban members of the District to have meters installed in the main trunk line before it connects to the MWRA system. Thus the assessment can be based on flow. Boston and the other urban cities are opposed since they would be most affected by this more equitable formula. Stay tuned to see how this plays out.

To understand the town's involvement with MWRA, we need to look at history. In a 1957 Special Town Meeting, Wilmington voted to join the MDC sewerage district, which was the MWRA's predecessor. The 1960 Annual Town Meeting authorized the construction and operation of sewers within the town. Since then there have been several major extensions to the sewer system, which begins on Woburn Street at the Woburn city line.

In 1985 the MWRA was formed as an independent agency to improve water quality in Boston Harbor. It took over the MDC Sewerage District, which includes 43 communities. It currently sewers about one third of the state's population.

So how did we get stuck in the current financial quagmire? If you guessed anything other than politics, you have spent too much time under the hole in the ozone layer. We need to turn the clock back to 1972 when the Federal Water Pollution Control Act established stringent standards to improve the quality of our rivers and harbors. Grants were available to help with the construction of the treatment plants and collection systems. The federal government contributed 75 percent and the state added 15 percent. Many cities and towns made use of this program. In fact, the Silver Lake Interceptor was funded under this grant program. The governor and legislature, however, felt the EPA should grant a waiver for Boston Harbor. The cost was the chief concern. The politicians were concerned about the financial impact of having their constituents pay 10 percent of the construction cost.

After a decade of legal maneuvering and stalling, a federal judge stepped in and ordered the cleanup of Boston Harbor to begin and the treatment plant to be completed by 1999. The project was to be under the control of the newly created MWRA.

The technology was there in the 1970s, but the political backbone was not. So instead of receiving a 90 percent grant, the MWRA has received only a miserly five percent. The ratepayers are picking up the rest of the tab. So although the MWRA is bearing the brunt of the anger, they had two strikes against them when they started — political inaction and no grants.

Since it is unlikely that the state or federal government will provide additional construction grants for the harbor cleanup, other steps should be considered to mitigate the rate shock. Perhaps allowing homeowners to deduct sewer charges on their federal or state tax returns. Exempting the MWRA assessment from the limits of Proposition 2 1/2 will ease the burden of the already strapped communities within the district.

Since Boston Harbor has been a cesspool for the entire state for centuries, its cleanup costs should be spread out statewide. This may take some of the sting out of recent rate increases.

Grampa and Me

I remember the knots you taught me to tie,
Ones to hold on a lure, or to keep your near by.

Collecting the sticks, and lighting the fire
Cooking the marshmallows, never felt higher.

Suiting up and going to the lake
I wish I had never taken those good times for sake.

Taking me out over my heard,
Disobeying what my mother had said.

The times we went swimming will never be forgotten,
As well as the races you let me win often.

Fishing with you, was always a blast,
I still remember our very first cast.

You asked me to take care of your lawn,
But we both know I didn't belong.

I guess what I'm trying to say,
Is that you taught me a lot every new day.

And without you Gramps, I would not be,
Quite the same person that I am today.

I love you Gramps
Your Grandson Michael

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

I'm a friend of Evelyn Coto. She lives with her four young boys down Martin's Pond, the Wilmington side. She has been struggling to keep up with her bills. Due to this she got behind on her rent with the Wilmington Housing. She has tried to make an arrangement with the woman in charge.

There's no hope for her. No one wants to give her a break. They (housing and lawyer) took Evelyn to court to get her out. I went with her today and the court said Evelyn can stay until April; after that she is on the street. I'm not the smartest person but I don't understand why. Housing is there to help aren't they? The woman at Wilmington Housing told the court she destroyed the house. I've been in that home on Virginia Road. There's nothing wrong with it. Evelyn doesn't have a lawyer to defend her. She doesn't speak up to people. She's a very soft spoken young woman.

It scares me to think what would happen if I lost my husband; where would we (my three children and I) go? Is there any hope for them?

How can things like this just happen?

Yours truly,
Chris Richardson

Dear Larz:

I would like to thank the Wilmington High school Band for braving the cold last Saturday and successfully delivering over 5,000 Community Schools Brochures to each and ever house in Wilmington - except those houses with big dogs not on leashes.

Please understand that we will not jeopardize the safety of the students for the sake of a flyer. We told the students that if there was an unleashed dog in the yard or the street, skip the house.

The WHS Band is one of the most dedicated, hard working groups I have ever worked with. Thank you, WHS Band!! You did a great job!! If you didn't receive your brochure, you can pick one up at the library, Town Hall or the High School.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. President:

You don't know me but I am one of the sailors entombed in the hull of the Old Arizona at Pearl Harbor. When the nights are quiet we can hear voices from above and lately we don't like what we are hearing.

A foreign diplomat has said our workers are lazy and illiterate and that our factories are being "shut down" causing American workers to walk the streets. By the Grace of God, this has to STOP.

Get MAD, Mr. President, and shout in a loud, forcible voice: BUY AMERICAN ... Let the mandate go to our states, cities and towns. Give Top Priority to American products when buying goods. Advise our citizens when making purchases that if it doesn't say "MADE IN AMERICA" to put it down, put it back.

The oil slicks still surface here, but lately one cannot measure the amount of tears being shed from the construction of the human spirit.

As a country, together, we can lick any form of aggression, depression or recession by sticking together. My shipmates and the whole country will be beside you.

I have to go now...it's roll call time and I want to get this letter on the mail boat.

Yours in a common cause, from one Navy Vet to another..

The General Laws of Mass specifically prohibit, the affixment of any sign to a tree in a public way, or any other advertisement without the written permission of the office in charge of such trees.

frankly speaking

Michelle Nortonen should not be professionally discriminated against because her father is chairman of the Wilmington School Committee. For that matter, Nortonen should not become the unwilling political football in any game of personnel rugby, played between colorful school committee factions.

Nortonen, the vice-principal of the Shawsheen Elementary School, is a smart example of a rarity in this local government - that not every big "townie family" gets jobs for members simply because of their surnames. Instead, Nortonen is a seasoned educator earning every step and each accolade of her career through hard work and dedication. Her obvious abilities have merited the professional advancements.

If you have a child at the Shawsheen Elementary no explanations are needed as to why Michelle Nortonen is fully prepared to be a school principal in the local system. The two story brick building that stands near the old Middlesex Canal Aqueduct is proof that the best primary education in the Merrimack Valley can be obtained right here in Wilmington, thanks to administrators who know their jobs.

If school-based management is the new trend, whereby each school house is independently operated by the best headmaster the public can afford, than Nortonen as principal would be a case study for the merits of this new managment theorem.

Today, a search process is under-way to fill the post soon to be vacated by Delores Silva, and we agree with the propriety of the school committee majority in voting to post the job for all apply. If perception is important, Chairman Caira's vote opposing this was less than advisable.

We also agree there has yet to be a public assault against Nortonen by her father's opponents on the school committee. To date, the only information precipitating this is nothing beyond unsubstantiated rumors.

Former school committee chairman Tony Accardi recognized Nortonen's talents and said that his successor Caira may be in an untenable situation. "Ironically, his presence on the board may unfortunately hurt his daughter because it allows opponents to raise the issue of nepotism even when that issue isn't real," said Accardi.

But the real issue here is that Nortonen, on her own, merits the job. And in any event, legislation now gaining support on Beacon Hill would handicap local school committees, taking away their authority to confirm or reject the superintendent's major appointments.

This might be a positive development.

Briefly in Politics . . .

Town Manager Mike Caira said his surprise consolidation of the Water Department with the Department of Public Works will save taxpayer dollars "through consolidation of services." Meanwhile, a firestorm has erupted in town employee ranks over what one veteran town worker described as Caira's "bull in a china shop" technique.

One former municipal employee is said to be provoked enough to launch a bid for the board of selectmen. Retired firefighter Gerry Duggan confirms that he is a candidate and is circulating nomination papers. Duggan is the brother of just retired water department superintendent Paul Duggan.

Town Manager Caira has come under fire for consolidating Paul Duggan's post within days following the retirement. Duggan was employed at the water department for over 30 years, and as superintendent for near the last ten. The family has become almost synonomous with that municipal department.

However, Gerry Duggan contends that his candidacy is not linked directly to the water department affair, or any other rumored personal matters. "I deny the vendetta thing, but people are going to say it anyway," said the candidate.

Duggan is the nephew of another announced candidate, Conservation Commissioner Margaret Imbimbo. However, Duggan said that for reasons of health Imbimbo will leave the race shortly. "I believe she's dropping out," he said.

Duggan, once active in the local firefighters union, has not sought public office before. He opposes a raid on the redevelopment authority treasury and does not favor the present teachers' contract, which has garnered broad publicity.

The Butters Row resident is considered highly popular with town workers and many, including the other candidates, will be waiting to see how actively Duggan campaigns.

Kevin Comtois' entry into the Tewksbury selectmen's race promises a less than boring political foray this Spring. A South Tewksbury resident, Comtois, a former legislative aide to Rep. Jim Miceli, is known for his feisty political style and ability to take on the establishment.

Comtois said he's running to reinstate self-government in Tewksbury, "overrun by the selectmen when they imposed the new Trash Tax." The candidate questions the validity of the retroactive nature of the trash fee, and said selectmen exhibited their contempt for Proposition 2 1/2 when they imposed the fee immediately after voters rejected the override question.

Comtois is convinced that 1992 is a year in waiting for opposition candidates to incumbent selectmen. Tewksbury has garnered state-wide attention as it deals with the often emotional implications of a toxic dump site less than a quarter-of-a-mile from where Comtois resides. "I used to play out there when I was a kid, and it never should have gotten to this point. Where have the selectmen been and why are our kids still allowed to play out there," said Comtois. Also, Tewksbury, like most communities, wrangles with a deluge of budgetary problems just as the Department of Employment and Training reports the new unemployment rate for the town still hovers near ten percent. "People who are out of work and just struggling to get by in this Depression, can't afford to bail out the politicians who don't know how to balance budgets."

Comtois said he's making only one campaign promise, and that is to run a "clean, honest and issues-orientated campaign." Said the candidate, "I think if there was ever a time for substance and real long-term ideas on the campaign trail, it is now."

Comtois is a graduate student at the University of Massachusetts at Boston studying American Civilization. He did his undergraduate work at Westfield State, is a graduate of Tewksbury Memorial High School and a nineteen-year town resident. Upon completing his studies, Comtois intends to seek a career as a college professor.

The Math-a-Thon is here! Our biggest and only fund raiser of the year began on Wed. Feb. 12. Each child received a packet of math problems worth a total of 200 points. Family members and friends are asked to pledge an amount of money for each problem answered correctly. Packets will be returned to school Feb. 26 for correction. Corrected packets will be returned to the children on Wed., March 4. At that time pledge money should be collected and returned to school.

Mrs. Mahoney welcomes calls from parents or visits from parents who wish to donate books to the school library in the name of their child. To celebrate a special occasion a parent may meet with Mrs. Mahoney, review selected lists of books, purchase the book and have it donated in the name of the child. A special book plate inserted into the book states the book was given by your child.

The Gifted and Talented Program is now in its fifth week. The boys and girls are discussing the events of the world through the media, newspaper and magazine articles. Lively discussions on the economy, the presidential visit to Japan, the new "Russia" and where it's going "after communism" are but a few of the many topics discussed.

The kindergarten children held an Olympics of their own last week. The children participated in the following events: ice skate lacing, hockey writing, downhill alphabet skiing, figure eight skating, speed skate page turning, winter poem, Kindergarten Olympian Says, and Olympic Knowledge. Medals were awarded in a special ceremony on Friday.

Ms. Girouard's math class has been working on many types of graphs. There is a nice display outside the class showing the expertise of the class in making original graphs.

We had a terrific time on Friday night, Feb. 7, square dancing with the boys and girls. Mrs. Stinson, our Project Charlie teacher, did a wonderful job teaching and calling the different dances.

Mrs. Spinosa is delighted to be back with all her friends at the Shawsheen School. Music classes are going very well and Mrs. Spinosa is especially delighted because she has a 77 member chorus. They are preparing for their spring program with the colorful theme of "The Rainbow Express."

The 100th day of school was celebrated on Wed., Feb. 12. Some of the first grade classes celebrated by designing special 100 day vests and parading through some of the classrooms with them. The fourth grade classes focused on activities related to "100." Each child brought in 100 subjects to share with each of the other fourth grade students.

The Chinese New Year was celebrated in grand style on Feb. 4. The children participated in several activities including making a traditional Chinese dragon, parading it through the school, and cooking delicious Chinese dishes.

Mrs.Penttinen's classroom made Valentines for hospitalized veterans by writing messages and poems to the veterans. Mrs. Penttinen's classroom, along with the children in Ms. Quinlan's room are building bird feeders in science class. The feeders are but a part of the study of birds, their habitants and behaviors.

Mr Graham's classroom completed a unit on dinosaurs during which time the children made their own fossils and wrote a class book. The children are taking it home one at a time to share with their families.

Grade five children from Ms. Girouard's room are working with grade one children in Mrs. Foresteire's classroom each morning.

During the month of January, the boys and girls filled 15 bags with grocery items brought in from home. These were sent to the local food pantry. We are hoping that we can send even more bags over this month. Collection date is February 28.

Our next PAC meeting is Tuesday, Feb. 25 at 7:30 p.m. in the cafeteria. See you then !

Teen wins in pageant

Michelle Ciaramaglia, 16, of Wilmington was awarded the title of Miss Congeniality, 1991 at the Miss Teen Boston Pageant held at the Berkeley Performance Center on November 16 in Boston.

Michelle is a honor student and an active athlete currently enrolled in the Health Technology course at Shawsheen Tech.

Bank take over

Massbank for Savings acquired a second location in Tewksbury on Friday when it took over six offices of the Central Savings Bank. Central, a Lowell-based bank, was taken over by federal regulators at the close of business on Friday afternoon. Reading-based Massbank had previously taken over the Tewksbury and Chelmsford offices of Comfed in September.

Wilmington playground to have 'necessary facilities'

Near the Wilmington Town Hall is a pine forest, known for many years as Winn's Woods. A playground is in that forest, green grass, and a baseball diamond. The playground has field lights, but no toilet facilities. Girls' baseball, Pop Warner, Little League and soccer are some of the games played on that field.

The Board of Water and Sewer Commissioners, on February 13 approved a proposal that there be toilet facilities, which could hook up to the Town Hall sewer, nearby. Construction will probably start in a few months.

CHRISTINA APPLEGATE
DON'T TELL MOM THE BABYSITTER'S DEAD

It's a summer full of unexpected fun and foul play when mom takes a trip to Australia leaving Sue Ellen (Christina Applegate (Married with Children)) and the kids behind. What they didn't expect was the babysitter mom left to take care of them—an elderly tyrant who's ready to make their lives miserable—until she keels over dead on the first night. Now the kids figure they can have the summer of their dreams, only they don't have any money for the basics—like movies, dates, and pizza. It's up to Sue Ellen to find a job, but to make it in the adult world she has to fake it from the top of her résumé to the tip of her nail polish. If she succeeds, Sue Ellen and the kids are going to have a summer they'll never forget...so long as they DON'T TELL MOM THE BABYSITTER'S DEAD.

Hair is the Total You
by Pam Connaghan

SHADES OF YESTERDAY

As a woman ages, she is likely to find that her hair is darker and duller than she would like. This age-related change is due, in part, to lessening melanin (pigment) production in her hair. To counter this effect, many women decide to color their hair in an effort to regain their youthful hair color and sheen. As it turns out, this is precisely the tack to take. By duplicating hair's childhood shade, a woman is likely to remain within a few shades of her hair's current color. This will have the effect of giving hair a lighter, brighter look that will best complement skin tone. If childhood color does not produce the desired effect, use it as a starting point from which a darker or lighter selection may be made.

If you are thinking about changing your hair color, see us first for our wonderful Matrix beauty products available at SHAWSHEEN HAIR SALON, 161 Shawsheen Ave., Rt. 129, Wilmington. Matrix adds shine and rich, radiant color for healthy, silky hair. Hours: open six days and nights of the week, closed Sun. Our salon uses only environmentally safe products.

Matrix Moderations, a semi permanent hair color to blend your gray. Ask the specialists about this new product.

HINT: By going with darker hair color, a middle aged women is likely to contrast her hair too sharply with aging skin tones.

SWEAT fishing derby finally breaks the ice

by Bill Conlon

For the first time in four years, the "annual" Shawsheen Watershed Environmental Action Team (also called SWEAT) ice fishing derby, sponsored by Met Life, went off as planned on Sunday. Thin ice forced cancelation of the event for three years running, so it was a pleasant surprise to finally fish Ames Pond again.

Pleasantly surprising indeed! The fish in Ames Pond hardly ever see a hook, so they've had years to grow without being disturbed.

And it showed.

The ice on Ames was marginal, four to six inches thick at the most. Heavy rains the night before almost killed the derby, and the early rain was a big factor in the small turnout for the derby -- only 30 anglers signed up, with many trickling in as the day wore on.

All day, there were "drain holes" appearing in the ice. The warmer water on top would find a crack and bubble down to the lake below, and the warm water would widen out the hole. Some of the natural holes on the pond were nearly a foot wide at day's end. Scary. Also, the warm weather was eating the ice, leaving a mere three inches in most spots by quitting time.

Barring an arctic air mass, the ice fishing season is done.

By nine o'clock, only two fish had been registered, and the biggest was a 1-pound, 14-ounce pickerel that was taken by Paul Niven. Another slow day of ice fishing, or that's the way it looked.

Just after 10 a.m., however, the entire complexion of the derby was altered. This author's deepest tipup, at around six feet deep, went off.

When I got to the tipup, the spool was screaming. The unseen fish was tearing off line by the yard. Rather than wait, I grabbed the tipup and set the hook, and I was rewarded with a mighty pull from the far end of the line. Hot damn!

What came up through the ice was majestic. A nice bass, fat and sleek. The only reason the fish made its way to the weigh-in table, however, was through the thoughtful action of Pete McLellan of Wilmington.

Pete was fishing next to me, with Bobby Silva. When I set the hook and began to do battle, Pete knelt by the hole, hands ready. Thank God he did.

As I lifted the fish out of the hole, the line snapped. For a second the big bass was lying on top the hole, sideways, and flopping. Doom was guaranteed. It was then that young Pete scooped the fish away from the hole, thus keeping the big fish from certain escape. Thanks again, Pete.

With feeling Sean Hunter of Marion Drive, Tewksbury, tends to his line after a flag, feeling cautiously for the tug of a fish. The fish managed to escape, however.

Alley ooop! Paul Niven of Tewksbury lifts a small pickerel through the ice on Ames Pond during Sunday's SWEAT - MetLife derby, while his brother, Pete, looks on. The rapacious little pickerel gave anglers plenty of action.

The bass weighed in at 4-pounds, 11-ounces, and easily took the first place on the three-fish prize board.

Hey, I was ready to leave and go have breakfast. It was a slow day of fishing, and I'd just grabbed the top first prize. No problem, I thought. Nobody is going to challenge that.

Yeah, right. About an hour later, a whoop when up from the far side of Ames Pond, and the angler held up a monster. A peek through the binoculars showed that the lucky angler was none other than Eddie Collings, whom I'd fished with the previous week on Crystal Lake in Chelmsford, with no luck between us. Now Ed and I were both lucky.

I waited for Ed at the weigh-in table, with a sinking feeling. He was smiling too widely as he walked up, and he refused to be a "nice guy" and release the fish for me.

Yup. Ed's bass pulled the scales to 5-pounds, 2-ounces, beating me by almost a half-pound. My $150 top prize had just dropped to half that.

Eat a bug, Ed. Do it today.

But the whooping wasn't done on the ice that day, although most guys didn't bother bringing in their fish unless they were truly memorable. A 5-pounder is tough to beat. Still, it made me nervous as hell all day, waiting for something bigger to be caught.

Mike Magliozzi of Billerica took a fat, 4-pound bass that held onto third place easily, worth $25. Add up the prizes and the $10 entry fees and you'll note that SWEAT made all of $50 from the derby.

But Mike was lucky in a different sort of way. He said he had brought small shiners to the derby, but they weren't doing him any good.

Fishing next to Mike was John Koczerga of Tewksbury, who gave Mike some of his bigger bait. Using the bigger minnows, Mike was able to land a pickerel that pushed John's 3-pound, 4-ounce pickerel off.

From across the ice I heard Mike ask for another shiner, and John's bellowed reply was "Sure, but it'll cost ya TEN BUCKS!"

The derby ran from 7 a.m. until 3 p.m., which was a long day on the thin ice. Luckily, no "fall throughs" were reported, and police Officer Kevin Reese walked the ice (on a paid detail) to prevent any vehicles from driving onto the pond.

The three winners received their cash prize from Rick Barry from SWEAT, and a brass trophy from Lisa Clifton, MetLife's Marketing manager. A total of 18 fish were taken, and all were released alive.

Still, everyone was surprised to find that the smallest fish on the prize board was a 4-pound bass. A nice day of fishing, indeed.

Eat another bug, Ed. I'll see you on the ice again next year.

Third annual Golfers' Expo March 6-8

The golfers' harbinger of the new season is heading to Boston for a three day weekend.

The region's biggest indoor golfing event, the third annual Golfers' Expo, will be held at Boston's Bayside Exposition Center Friday through Sunday, March 6 through 8, presented by Key Buick Dealers.

Jan Stephenson, one of the glamorous and outstanding golfers on the LPGA tour, will headline the array of golf professionals at this indoor spectacle. She will appear Saturday and give tips and demonstrations. A winner of three of the four major championships, she needs only the Nabisco Dinah Shore to make her only the second player in LPGA history to win all four top tournaments. Hall of Famer Pat Bradley earned that distinction in 1986.

With career earnings of more than $1.8 million, Jan ranks ninth in the LPGA for winning purses. The 5'5" blue eyed, blonde golfer also professionally designs golf courses. Jan will sign autographs after each of the three performances on Saturday at the Expo.

Golfers' Expo is the only major exposition devoted exclusively to golf. Leading golf companies will be represented at this exciting show with the newest golf equipment and devices. Also featured will be free golf instruction, $1,000 hole-in-one contest, as well as mini-lessons and high tech swing analyses by PGA professionals.

Show hours are 4 to 10 p.m. Friday, March 6; 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, March 7; and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, March 8. General admission is $7 for adults and $2 for children under 12.

Altron ski team

This strange-looking crew of skiers is actually the Altron ski team. Altron, a Wilmington manufacturer of circuit boards and interconnect products, entered a team in a fundraising race, the Corporate Challenge, to benefit the New England Handicapped Sportsmen's Association two weeks ago at Mt. Sunapee. If nothing else, Altron had the zaniest outfits on the mountain, yellow coveralls with hard hats and pinwheels. From left, Stew Levine, Team Capt. Dennis Sokol, Team Manager Ed Nadeau, Ray Dubois, and Roy Lecesse. In a field of 20 teams, Altron's was one of six teams from Wilmington in the race. Koch Membrane entered four teams. The Town Crier also sponsored a team.

The New England Handicapped Sportsmen's Association runs a free skiing program for physically handicapped persons. The program operates on weekends in January, February and early March at Mt. Sunapee in New Hampshire. For more information, call 1-800-628-4484

TMHS faculty battles Magicians March 9

When the Fabulous Magicians take to the TMHS' court on Monday, March 9 at 7:30 p.m. against the Tewksbury Faculty All Stars they will be hoping to extend their winning streak to over 6,000 games.

The team, led by the world's greatest dribbler, Marques Haynes, is not only a squad that wins games, but they are, without doubt, the greatest comedy basketball touring group in the world.

In addition to Haynes, the Magicians will come to town with an array of talent that is second to none. With such talent as the clown prince of basketball, Valentino Willis, Eric Moore, Quinton Johnson and John Smith, the team has not been defeated since the early 1960's.

Valentino, who is the team's captain, is the undisputed clown prince of basketball, admired each night by the fans who come out to see him on his return performances in their town. Captain Valentino teams with one of the Magician players at halftime with over 50 youngsters putting on a spectacular intermission show.

This game is being sponsored by Tewksbury High School National Honor Society in an effort to raise funds for its' scholarship.

Tickets are available at Tewksbury High School, junior high school and elementary schools. For more information call 851-2011.

Coaching education seminars

Eleven coaching education seminars, five in sport science and six in sport first aid, are being offered this winter and spring by the American Coaching Effectiveness Program (ACEP) and the National Federation of State High School Associations.

The seminars are part of the National Federation's program for coaches, called National Federation Interscholastic Coaches Education Program (NFICEP). A sport first aid seminar will be held in Boston March 13.

At the Sport Science seminar, athletic directors, master coaches,and others will learn how to conduct a Sport Science coaches' clinic. Communicating with athletes, motivating athletes, keeping winning in perspective, teaching skills more effectively, developing a physical training program, and helping prevent drug use are Sport Science seminar and clinic topics.

At the Sport First Aid seminar, athletic trainers and other sports medicine specialists will learn how to conduct a Sport First Aid coaches' clinic. Topics for the Sport First Aid seminar and clinic include: developing a plan for emergency situations, preventing avoidable injuries, evaluating serious and minor injuries and illnesses, providing proper immediate care for common problems and responding to life threatening emergencies.

The Sport Science seminar costs $225; the Sport First Aid seminar costs $195. Participants at each seminar receive a text (Successful Coaching for Sport Science and Sport First Aid), an instructor and clinic guide, certification, lunches, and a subscription to the newsletter for ACEP/NFICEP instructors, The Coaches' Coach.

The National Federation represents virtually all secondary schools and 200,000 coaches throughout the U.S., as well as officials and administrators. For additional information, call 217-351-5076.

Art students honored by Boston Globe

Six Wilmington High School students have been honored by the 1992 Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards. Jeff Berg was a Gold Key winner; Jennifer Adley, Russell Allard, Fabienne Aizac, Angela Gosse and Paul Rich received honorable mentions. Out of 1200 entries there were only 247 Gold Keys and 352 Honorable Mentions.

The Golden Globe Scholastic Art Awards is an annual statewide program that encourages achievement in creative art.

Jeff and Angela are two of Ms. Suzette Hall's art students. Jeff's 18 x 24 cray-pas drawing was of imaginary creatures, half man and half horse, playing chess. Angela used white chalk on colored paper to create a beautiful portrait drawing that she drew from life.

Russell's 8 x 10 landscape photograph was done in Ms. Hall's photography class. Russell first sepia toned his picture and then painted it.

Paul, also a student of Ms. Hall, is doing an independent study in photography. He was inspired by Jerry Uelsmann's photographs. Paul used a complicated process using two negatives to create one image.

Jennifer and Fabienne are Mrs. Karen Larrabee's art students. Jennifer's water color sculpture was a collection of paper forms (cones, boxes and cylinders) that was painted using various watercolor techniques. Jennifer created a variety of patterns on her forms and used only three colors throughout. Empty space around the forms was emphasized with colored tissue paper.

Fabienne's monochromatic tempra painting, done in tints of violet, was an interesting view of a still life as seen through a viewfinder. The objects depicted included a high heel shoe, glass containers of different shapes and a wooden block painted in an abstract style.

The Gold Key recipients will have their work on display at the Atrium of the Massachusetts Transportation Building, 10 Park Plaza, Boston. The hours are Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., weekends from 2 to 5 p.m., until March 1. Questions should be directed to Tim O'Connor at (617) 482-1313.

Tewksbury cop soaked after chase

by Bill Conlon

A stolen car chase that began in town ended up with one arrest and a soaked Tewksbury officer.

Officer Bob Budryk tried to pull over a car on Route 38 on February 12, he said, but the car instead took the ramp onto I-495 southbound, so Budryk followed.

Budryk said the suspect car took the Lowell Connector off I-495 and then took the Plain Street. Budryk followed, and said the car pulled to the side shortly afterwards, and all four occupants "bailed out" and set off on foot.

The foot chase, Budryk said, led down to a stream, which he said was Hale's Brook in Lowell. Two of the suspects raced safely across the partially-frozen stream, he said, and a third fell through the ice and was soaked up to the ribs, but was able to climb back out and scamper up the stream bank.

Budryk was still behind the car's driver, however, and both the cop and the suspect crashed through the ice and were immersed in the icy waters. Budryk said the suspect then climbed out of the water and tried to scale the bank, only to be tackled and handcuffed by the side of the brook.

Budryk said he didn't really feel the cold until he calmed down later. Adrenaline kept him from feeling the chill, he said, but afterward he became terribly cold. It was a very cold night.

Arrested was a Lowell juvenile, age 16, on charges of larceny of a motor vehicle, possession of burglarous tools, failure to stop for a police officer, operating without a license, operating to endanger, and speeding. The next day the car was recovered by police from UMass-Lowell. The other three suspects got away.

Officer Bob Budryk, by the way, is engaged. Let's hope his wife will be able to handle surprises.

Black Kat story stirred many memories

Dozens of persons have told Larz about the names of the place which was once The Black Kat, in Wilmington. It was the subject of a Town Crier article on January 22.

The names of the persons who were selling liquor etc. were volunteered. Larz did not publish names.

There were even names of person who stood around in the Wilmington Square area and sold bottles, hidden under their coats, and of other persons who worked in stores and had a side business.

Only one Wilmington resident was willing to say he had been in The Black Kat. Edmund (Eddie) Sargent told Larz that he had to go in there on one occasion, to tell the owner that if he did not pay the water bill the town would shut off the water. The message came from Caleb Harriman, chairman of the Wilmington Water Committee, and Eddie was the superintendent.

From several sources: The Black Kat became the Blue Terrace before it became a professional wrestling place, and then a furniture store.

From other sources: First it was the Blue Terrace, and then it was The Black Kat.

Across from the site of Rocco's today, was the Rainbow. It was at the Rainbow where Larz was a guest of his uncle Christian (Pop) Neilson, and noticed nothing wrong.

There was a good reason. It had to do with the naming of postmasters, etc. every time there was a change of political party in the White House.

Henry Porter

Henry Porter was postmaster for many years in Wilmington.

His father Rudolph (Dolph) Porter came down from Nova Scotia in 1876, as a 16 year old boy on a fishing schooner. When the schooner docked at Gloucester Rudolph got off and walked across country to Wilmington, where he got a job as a section hand, working on railroad track maintenance. After some years he became the section boss, and used to ride around on a "handcar."

Rudolph was well known and well liked in Wilmington.Further,he was always ready to pose for a picture.

Henry was born in 1899, and had his schooling in what was later called the Center School. When he was in the eighth grade the new high school, now the Swain School was opened for business,and had, among other things, a baseball team.

That baseball team was short one member, so Henry, an eighth grader became a player. His picture appeared once in the Town Crier, with other members of that team, posed on the front steps of the old High School.

Henry had a good head for business. He took over (or maybe started) a lunch cart in North Woburn, and he used to help older residents of Wilmington compute their income taxes.

That was how he met "Pop" Neilson. Once a year Pop would have his income taxes computed by Henry.

Henry began to promote. There was a group of young men in North Woburn who had started an orchestra, Roy Dillon, Ray Edmonds, Charles Dillon and Peter Brogna, to name some of them. This of course was before the days of radio.

Soon Porter's Follies were being offered, as entertainment for the public.

On Tuesday, March 4, 1924 a minstrel show, Porter's Follies was put on, in the Grange Hall, Wildwood Street, Wilmington. It had an interesting (today) program.

From the Brogna family, well known in North Woburn were: Peter, John, Richard, Susie and James, with Charlie being the stage hand. Henry did a solo: "On the Back Porch." He and O. Nutile (unknown to the writer) and Mike Scelzi sang a song entitled "Henry's Lunch Room", and toward the end of the program Porter and Nutile did a song and dance.

Henry Porter must have been a pretty handy person. It sounds as though it was a lively evening.

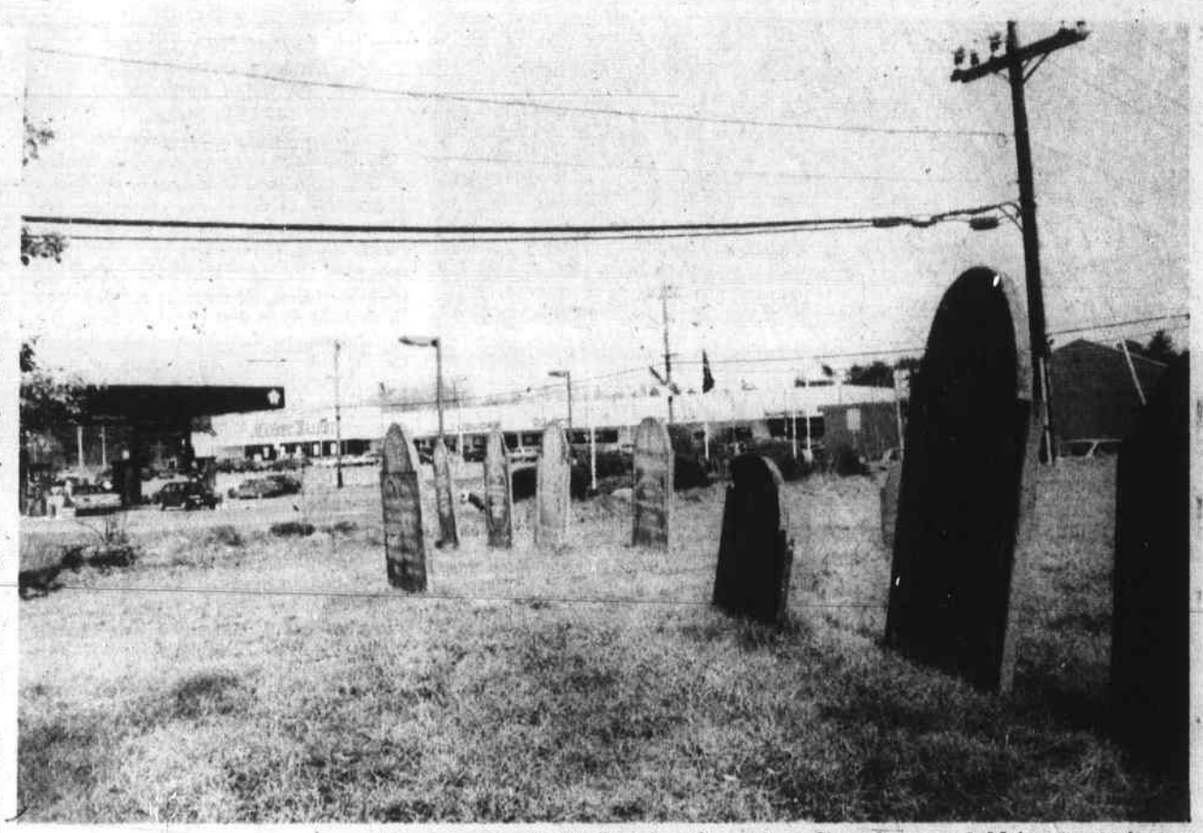

Anyway, some time about 1928-30 Henry Porter became postmaster of Wilmington. Then, in 1932 there was a new president.

Henry was bounced out. He was not a member of the correct political party, and another person was appointed.

But when the accounts of the post office became fouled Henry got the job back, and he stayed postmaster for nearly 60 years.

Among other things he was the second person to become president of the Rotary Club of Wilmington.

And, unknown to Larz, it was Henry Porter who was running the Rainbow, across from Rocco's, when Pop took Larz to a Sunday dinner. Pop could not have chosen a finer man to be the host.

Situation grave at neglected cemetery

by Meredith Lawrie

Restaurants and gas stations, tend to dominate the area around Main and Shawsheen streets in Tewksbury. But a closer look at this jumble of modern day life reveals an area untouched - and untouchable - by eager developers.

This land, at the corner of Main and Shawsheen streets, is the final resting place for many of the towns first residents and their descendants, including members of the once prominent Kittredge family. It is called South Burying Ground, although there is no marker labeling it so.

This graveyard, which dates back to the 1700's, seems out of place now in this busy section of town. Overgrown with weeds, the cemetery is sadly unkept and has an aura of decay and neglect. Inscriptions on some of the stones can't be read because they have been broken by vandals, others have become illegible after enduring many rubbings.

The cemetery is owned by the town of Tewksbury, as is the one on the corner of East and Lee streets. Neither cemetery has received the attention and care accorded the present cemetery on East Street.

According to Sandra Barbeau, Executive Secretary to the Board of Selectman, an annual bid is held under Chapter 30B, for the position of Cemetery Officer of the two graveyards.

This position was awarded to John L. Collins of Northfield, N.H., a position previously held for years by Collins' father, Leslie.

Collins, who is vacationing in Florida, was unavailable for comment, but Barbeau reports that the Cemetery Officer position pays $1250.00. The duties the job entails include cutting the grass, and keeping the walls in repair.

The cemeteries have more problems than the lawn and the walls, however, such as broken tree limbs dangling to the ground.

William Burris of the Department of Public Works feels that one person can not bring the two graveyards up to acceptable standards.

"The D.P.W. is taking part in the caretaking of the cemeteries for the first time this year," he said. "We have the equipment necessary for the landscaping the graveyards require."

Burris added that he believes one day the cemeteries will fall under full responsibility of the D.P.W.

Local residents complain that the graveyards are a disgrace to the town.

Ed Bowley, who has resided next to South Burying Ground for 55 years, feels it's a shame the graveyard was allowed to reach it's current condition.

"It really is a mess," he said. "I used to kick kids out of there late at night who were drinking, smoking, and vandalizing the stones."

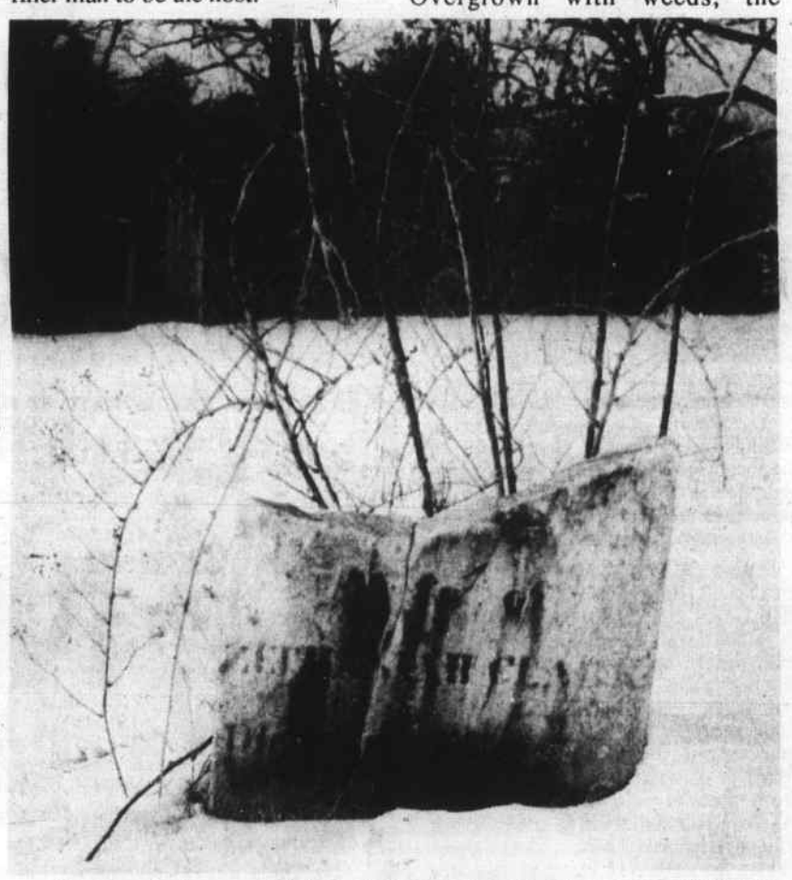

Bowley recalled a time when he was interested in fixing up the area, but now feels it's to big of a job for him.

Residents such as Bowley, interested in repairing the cemeteries on a volunteer basis will be discouraged to learn they'll have difficulty getting permission from the town.

Barbeu reports that insurance will become an issue in such a situation.

"The town manager will probably have some hesitations when considering whether to allow volunteers repair the cemetery, who aren't insured by the town," she said.

Under situations such as these, the cemetery with the remains of some of the town's early forefather's and veterans of the Revolutionary and French and Indian Wars will remain in a state of ruin.

Neglected stone

This headstone has been so long-neglected that it has a fair-sized bush growing out of a crack.

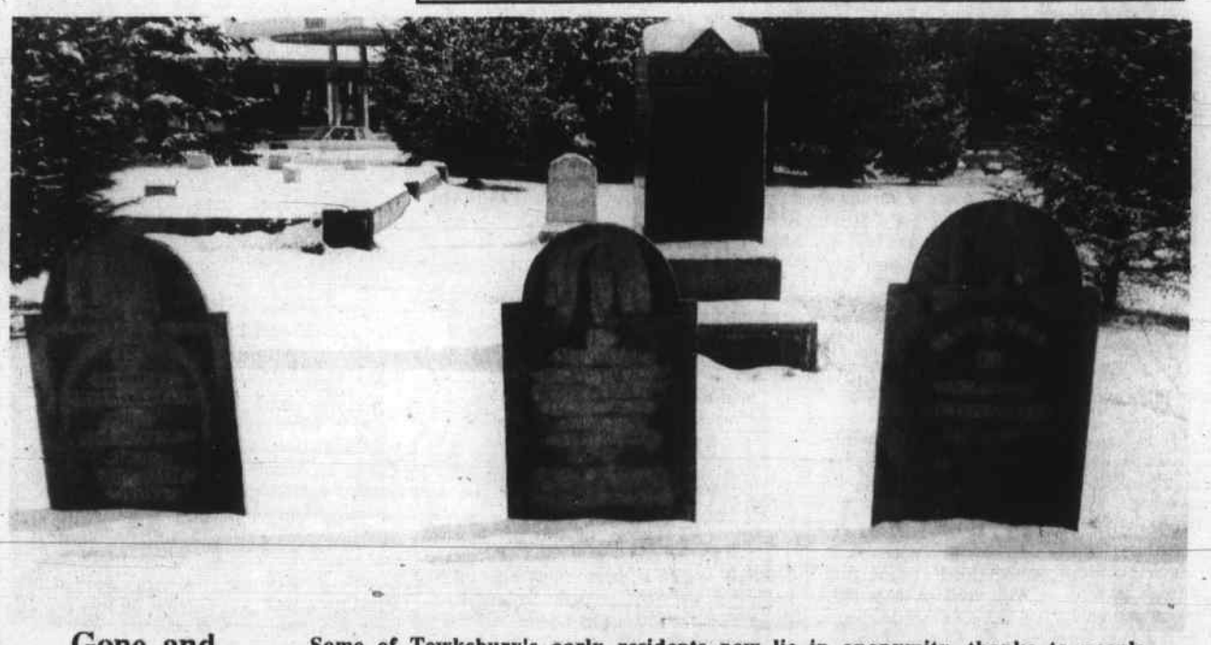

Sickness sore a long time we have
Physicians were in vain,
Till death did seize and God did please
To ease us of our pain.

—gravestone inscription, South Burying Ground

Infertility workshop

A one night workshop on coping with infertility and adoption will be offered to residents of Wilmington and surrounding areas on Monday, March 23 from 7 to 9 p.m. This subject will be addressed by Dr. Richard Kaufman, co-director of Psychotherapy Associates of North Reading.

To attend, register at Wilmington Community Schools walk-in registration at the high school cafeteria on Monday, February 24 from 7 to 9 p.m. or phone in registration from Feb. 25 through Feb. 28, 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., 657-7403 or 658-9913. Cost of the workshop is $5, no registration fees apply.

Gone, and now forgotten

Some of Tewksbury's early residents now lie in anonymity, thanks to people making gravestone rubbings. The practice raises havoc with the soft stone used in old gravestones.

S.A.F.E. darts a family sport

By DOUGLAS WOOD-BOYLE

Webster's Unabridged Dictionary shows the accompanying definitions for darts, the missile and the game, and Wakefield's Emmet Halpin said the game should also be considered a sport as opposed to pub pasttime.

Halpin should know. He is an accomplished aficionado of the sport who plays regularly in tournaments and is a local officer in the American Darts Organization (ADO)

He is also the founder of the S.A.F.E. (Smoke and Alcohol Free Environment) Dart League that meets every Monday night at 7 p.m. in the Knights of Columbus (K of C) Hall, Main Street, North Reading.

"I have played darts since 1974," Halpin said. "It has always been in a booze atmosphere."

Halpin explained that he quit smoking and drinking in 1986, "but, I didn't want to quit darts.

"However, the smoke got to me after two years."

Finding there was no way to escape the smoke in a barroom or pub setting, Halpin set out to form SAFE.

Two other benefits were discovered with the formation of the league.

Halpin said "We found if we take the booze out, you can treat the game as a sport rather than a past time in a pub."

He noted that Budweiser and Coors sponsor some big money tournaments. However, he added "The stigma of alcohol keeps the good sponsorship away."

Alcohol has also caused a gap of three years between the ADO sponsored youth events and the next time a young person can play the game on a regular basis.

According to Halpin the ADO youth leagues carry a teen until they are 18-years-old. The youths then have to wait until they are 21 to legally play again.

därt, n. [ME. dart; OFr. dart, a dart.]
1. a small, pointed weapon, to be thrown or shot; a short lance; any missile.
Time shall throw a dart at thee.
—B. Jonson.

Halpin gives a lot of credit to the North Reading K of C, which donates their space for the 14 week season, for helping him to form the league.

The success of the concept is shown in the fact that the league is now starting it's third season. It has 14 members who regularly show up for intra-league meets on Mondays.

Halpin said that some of the members are very new to the game, such as Reading's Gail Porter, and others have been playing for a long time, such as Halpin and Tewksbury's John Spellman.

Porter, a mother of two grown children, has only played the game by official rules a total of four times.

She became interested in it after playing it in a pub with some friends. However, many of the leagues were to far away until Porter found SAFE, which was right up the street from her.

Spellman has been playing for 10-years. With the SAFE league, he can now enjoy the game in accompaniment of his wife, Nancy and daughter Roxane.

Halpin said to cover the discrepancy between the abilities of the veterans and the novices he has come up with a point-per-dart average (ppd) which allows the members to handicap themselves.

At the start of the season, the members shoot three qualifying rounds and the handicap is taken by averaging the rounds.

The handicaps are then used to differentiate the number of points that must be shot by the members in games of 501 or Cricket.

Halpin, who claims to be the best scorer in the league said that he would have to deduct all of the 501 points in that basic dart game. However, a person with a 10 handicap would only have to deduct 301 points.

Although sport is involved, Halpin said the league is also about "people getting together for a night out."

He added that some of the teams are all male and some are all female.

"Although 70 percent of the league is male, the females that play are good," Halpin said.

As Halpin explains the game doesn't take any physical ability. It is mostly hand and eye coordination.

Spellman noted that it is a good sport for him to play as he is a lefty.

Both Spellman and Porter also expressed their appreciation for the alcohol and smoke free atmosphere provided in the league.

"I am quite comfortable there.

Cholesterol programs at New England Memorial

New England Memorial Hospital (NEMH), Stoneham, is offering a nutrition education program for individuals interested in lowering their blood cholesterol level or protecting their cardiovascular health through diet and lifestyle changes. Discounted cholesterol tests are also being offered during the month of February.

"Cholesterol Countdown" teaches participants how diet and exercise relate to heart health and how making simple changes can reduce the likelihood of high blood pressure, stroke or a heart attack. Also discussed will be weight control, reducing the intake of fat and cholesterol, and the effects of alcohol and caffeine on heart health. Class members also will learn about reading food labels. Taught by a registered dietitian, the program meets on Thursdays from 6 to 7:30 p.m., beginning March 5.

In observance of National Heart Month, NEMH is offering a 50% discount on personal blood-fat profile tests. These tests provide a detailed analysis of a person's cholesterol level. This half-price offer is valid only during the month of February.

Vouchers for the blood test can be purchased for $17.50 at the NEMH Center for Health Promotion. Participants must fast for 12 hours before the test, then present the voucher to the NEMH Laboratory when they go to take the test. No appointment is necessary. The test reveals the level of total cholesterol, HDL ("good" cholesterol), LDL ("bad" cholesterol), triglycerides and glucose.

Test results are mailed to each participant, who may then call the Center for health Promotion to discuss the outcome of the test and find out how to lower cholesterol levels, if necessary.

To purchase a lipid voucher, or to register for "Cholesterol Countdown," call the NEMH Center for health promotion at (617) 979-7057.

Caring is a Family Tradition. Yours and Ours.

Choosing the right Nursing Home.

Choosing a quality Nursing Home is never easy. It's even more difficult to find one that meets the patient's needs as well as your own expectations. There are so many factors to consider; location and reputation, ambiance and amenities. Most importantly of all, the quality of care and level of services.

It's a big decision don't rush.

Take your time and consider all the different factors carefully. Don't settle on the nearest place or decide simply on the lowest price. There is more to the selection of a nursing home than just price. Sometimes only a few more dollars a day separates an outstanding facility from a mediocre one. Don't make a hasty decision because it is a big decision.

Consider Greenview Manor in Wakefield and what it has to offer. It is a facility that stands out from all the rest, and has all the things you are looking for.

A Tradition of Caring.

Greenview Manor is owned and operated by the Bane family. A family with over 30 years of experience and expertise in providing care and services to the elderly.

Greenview Manor has recently been up-graded and completely refurbished. A variety of comfortable, well-appointed accommodations await your selection and preference. Suites, deluxe semi-private rooms and very affordable standard units. Besides the attractive decor and design, there is something else very distinctive about Greenview Manor. The Bane family's personal commitment to high quality nursing care and attentive service motivates every department, every shift.

You will find Greenview Manor has all the things you want and look for in a Nursing Home; quality care, friendly service, comfortable accommodations and affordable rates. One more important point. Caring is a family tradition, yours and ours.

BEAR LORE AND MORE - Visitors to "Bears: Imagination and Reality" can get up close to more than 25 taxidermic mounts of the animal that has captivated the imagination of different cultures throughout the world. The nation's most comprehensive traveling exhibition about grizzly and black bears opened January 30 at the Museum of Science, Boston and runs through May 10.

Science Museum bear exhibit

What do Cam Neely and Ray Bourque have in common with Yogi, Boo-Boo, and Winnie the Pooh? They're all bears. Now open, a new exhibition at the Museum of Science, Bears: Imagination and Reality, looks at the habits and habitats of these furry creatures and examines the bear as an icon in different cultures.

More than 25 taxidermic mounts of both young and adult grizzly and black bears greet visitors in this fascinating comparison of real life bears and their counterparts of legend and lore.

During February school vacation week, the museum offers "Teddy Bear Days," a week-long celebration of bear lore each afternoon, including storytelling by Diane Edgecomb on February 19, 21, 22, 23; theatrical performances by the Boston Children's Theater adapted from the A.A. Milne classic "The House at Pooh Corner," and a teddy bear parade through the exhibit halls following the 2:30 p.m. performance of the play on February 17, 18 and 20. World War II exhibit now at Heritage Museum

"With Weapons and Wits: Propaganda and Psychological Warfare During World War II" is on view at the Museum of Our National Heritage through May 17. The exhibit, organized to mark the 50th anniversary of U.S. entry into the war, presents a unique view of this epic conflict through an examination of the uses of propaganda.

A sampling of public response to the dramatic posters, stirring letters written by war-time leaders, and other documents and artifacts on view, includes:

"A fine exhibit that reminds us how we're always vulnerable to the horrors of war, and how important it is to preserve life and peace."

The impressive array of materials in the exhibit is drawn exclusively from the collection of Kenneth W. Rendell. "With Weapons and Wits" brings to life the great struggle of the War through a number of different artifacts

Original photos from prisoner-of-war camps and pictures of bomber crews who failed to return from their missions serve as powerful reminders of the sacrifice for freedom. Letters and documents written by leaders of World War II detail many momentous events, Patton's farewell address to his army is one of the unique original documents on view.

The Museum of Our National Heritage is located at 33 Marrett Road, Lexington, at the corner of Route 2A and Massachusetts Avenue. Admission to the Museum and parking are free.

Learn about disabilities

The third grade class at St. Joseph's School in Wakefield has a new understanding of visual disabilities. The children are taking part in the L.A.D. (Learning About Disabilities) program which is being offered again this year at St. Joseph's.

Staffed entirely by volunteers, this portion of the L.A.D. program allowed the third graders to experience some of the obstacles which must be overcome by the sight impaired. The children were reading their names in Braille, feeling their way through a specialized monopoly game, walking in the dark with a cane and experimenting with materials developed to aid the sight impaired.

A blind guest speaker added a very personal touch. The third graders gained an awareness of and respect for those who are able to overcome a major disability as part of their daily lives.

S.A.F.E. darts

From S-1

It works quite nicely," Porter said.

She added, "The time goes by quickly, two hours seems like 20-minutes."

Spellman has been playing the game for about 10-years and said "I quit the bars after an altercation with a drunken gentleman."

Spellman said, The reason I got involved with SAFE is that I wanted to play the game as a sport, without alcohol involved."

His wife and daughter joined him when he found SAFE in its first season and they have been playing together for three years now.

Nancy said "It was my first experience. My point-per-dart average has gone up four or five points."

She invites beginners to join, noting, We do teach the game and its intricacies."

Porter has become so excited about the game she has purchased a dart board for her home.

She describes herself as a sports person who plays volley-ball and has tried her hand at bowling.

Although she is the newest member, Porter is not the youngest member of the league which ranges in age from 20 to 46-years-old.

The players come from all over, and counting Tristan Redgrave, now of Newton, but originally from England, it could be called international in nature.

Halpin noted the irony of Redgrave, who comes from the motherland of darts, but did not learn the game until coming to this country.

Porter is proof that it also does not matter whether the darter is a left handed or right handed person.

Daily profession or career choices also do not matter to the members of the league. Halpin is an owner/operator of a truck rig for Crystal Express. Porter is an arborist, Porter is a training instructor, others range from blue collar to professional occupations.

According to Halpin, members of the league do not have to take any oaths of abstinence.

He noted that many of them go outside to have a cigarette. However, no drinking is allowed while playing darts.

Halpin did say that many will have a beer before or after the games.

Some of the players, including Halpin, also belong to other leagues.

Halpin said that he has rejoined a league on Tuesday nights because the team he is on has a good shot at making the state championships this year.

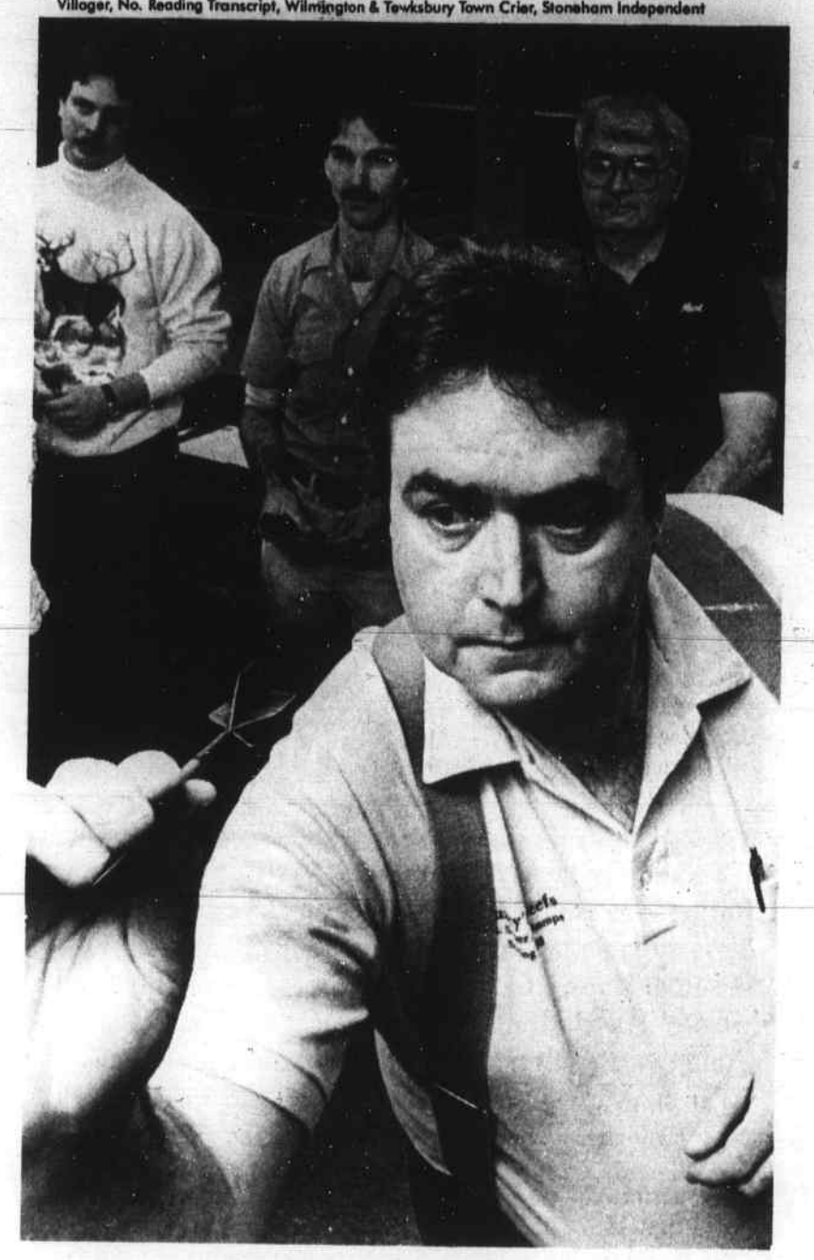

Halpin takes his darts very seriously and has hopes of someday making it to England as an official with the ADO.

Until that time comes, he stays busy with SAFE which he runs under an umbrella league called the Clipper City Dart Organization.

Through Clipper City, Halpin is also involved in teaching youths how to play the game and sets up several tournaments for them throughout the year.

Presently he takes youngsters from several area communities and brings them to Lawrence where he has established a league at the Disabled American Veterans Hall on Saturdays.

Halpin said that the League is into its fourth week of the season, but new members are invited to join. For more information call him at (617) 944-7587 or come to the North Reading K of C.

TAKING AIM ON A smoke and alcohol free sport is Emmett Halpin . His SAFE Dart League is in its third year and growing. (Don Young photo)

WILMINGTON - "We really owe it to one another to be kind and to do those little things for each other that don't cost a dime," says Wilmington's Jean Lefavour, in the Wilmington edition of "The Town Crier."

Known for her thriving nursery and handmade jewelry business, Lefavour - a storyteller also - has written "My Tree," the story of a young girl named Alice and life in a simpler time; and "The Donut Tree," about a dog, a squirrel and donuts that fall from the sky. Next year may see the publication of a third story, "A Chipmunk's Christmas."

Owner of Stillwater Co. and appreciated for her personal service, she notes that she writes from her own experience and from her heart - and that money has little to do with her writing.

Isn't that the truth?

Woodchips

ANTHONY MANCONI

I remember when Mike Gaffney, Bobby Belmonte, Michael Coughlin and Richie Rebidue rode to high school in Frank Gioia's old jalopy. They were late, missing the first two classes. They told the teacher that the car had a flat tire. "Well," Miss Nelson said, "You missed a test this morning, so take seats 'apart' from one another and get out your notebooks." Miss Nelson smiled and said, "Please write down which tire on the car was flat." (Folks, the correct answer was given by all these smart eggheads - and - it's somewhere in Woodchips.)

A "smile" is a universal language understood anywhere in the world. Try it yourselves when you travel to France, Italy, Spain, Ireland or anywhere else. You will find that when you smile invariably someone will respond with a smile!...George Gould told his doctor that he has been dreaming almost every night that a bevy of beautiful bathing beauties wearing bikinis chase him. The doctor smiled and said, "Mr. Gould, I can give you something that will put a stop to those dreams." "Holy smokes, doctor." George exclaimed, "I don't want to put a stop to the dreams, I just want you to give me something that will make me 'run' slower!" (The answer the boys wrote down was "The tire that is now in the trunk of the car is the one that went flat!")

I said to Kathy, "Why don't you join one of those exercise clubs that advertise in the Supplement?" "Why should I?" she asked. "Well," I said, "President Bush said, 'read my lips' and, looking at your Kathy, I can read your 'hips'."...Any father who thinks he's all-important should be reminded that this country honors father only one day a year - Pickles get a full week!

I used to work for a National Tree Service that had 'branches' all over the country. I'll go out on a 'limb' and say that I was unfairly fired. I was asked by the foreman, George Guyette, "Chipper, how can you tell a Dogwood tree?" My stupid answer was, "By it's 'bark'!" I must have one of the most beautiful letter carriers in the area. Her name is Karol McCue from Woburn. She goes up the stairs, delivers the mail, then turns like a ballet dancer. God Bless her, it's great to be young with vim and vigor.

Gillispie the new Pastor of St. Theresa's Church; Shawn Fitzgerald, Diane Specht, Bobbie Emerson, Co-Captain Beth Boccelli, Jessica Stark, Kim Demetri, Jen Hickey, Chris Peluso, Seana O'Sullivan and Rita Holden, all of North Reading; Laureen Maney, Dominic Malerba, Guy Festa, Timothy Fanikos, Father Jack Farrell and Carmine Mastrogionni CPA, all of Lynnfield.

I asked my friend Jimmy Fanikos what his church preference was and he replied, "Gothic." "I don't mean architecturally, what religion are you?" Jimmy smiled and said, "I'm an atheist - thank God."...Many of you know the wheezing and sneezing and sore throat of the demon flu. Well, my Aunt Nora went to the doctor who painted her sore throat. The secretary said, "That will be thirty dollars, please." "What!" Aunt Nora exclaimed, "Thirty dollars! All the doctor did was paint my throat!" "Well what did you expect," the secretary asked, "Wallpaper?"

It finally happened Folks, the sermon was so long last Sunday that one poor old chap died right in the pew. The medics were called and rushed in with a stretcher. The medic in charge said to the head usher (after carrying out the sixth person), "Well, we finally got the right one this time." Note: the sermon droned on through all the commotion.

Mario DiMino of Stoneham went in the card shop in the square and asked the clerk, "Do you have any Valentines that say, 'My love is for ONLY you?'" "Yes," the clerk replied, "they are right over here." "Good, Mario said, "I need six of them!" Dennis Tully asked his father why Adam was made first. His father told him, "Dennis, that was to give him a chance to say a few words." I know what Mr. Tully means because the only time I get a chance to open my mouth in my house is when I yawn!"

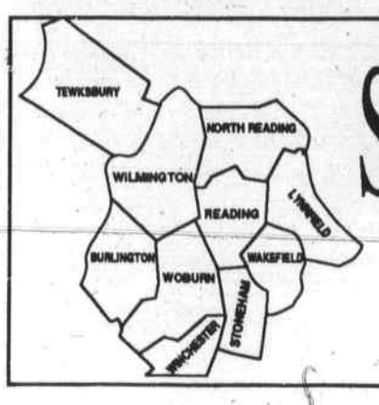

Blackie Vega is head over heels in debt. He received this note from his long-time creditors,"Dear Sir, please pay something on your account. We've been extremely patient with you. In fact we have done more for you than your mother did. We have carried you for 11 months!" Richie Hamel (a church usher) asked a lady, "How far down do you want to sit?" "All the way," answered the little old lady. "I'm very tired."

Marc Aloisi said to a pretty girl, "If you give me your telephone number, I'll call you up sometime." "It's in the telephone book," she replied. "What's your name?" Marc asked. She smiled and said. "That's in the book too!" W.C. Fields said, "Once during prohibition, I was forced to live for days on nothing but food and water."

The teacher had just told the class about the speed of light. She said, "Even though the sun is about 93 million miles away, the light reaches us in just a little over eight minutes. Isn't that amazing?" "Not really," replied Kenny Couture shrugging his shoulders, "After all it's 'downhill' all the way!"

Ryan Powers reached over and got the large piece of apple pie leaving a much smaller piece for his brother, Richie. "That shows, Richie said, "that you are NOT a gentleman,. I would have picked the smaller piece." "then what are you complaining about, you got the smaller piece didn't you?"

Super Star is Gary LaPierre.

—What does $6.75 million buy these days?

Voting that amount on the renovation of North Reading High, North Readingites produced the following: a new school library with more floor and storage space, easier handicapped access, including office and work room and conference room for small meetings; major repairs to the school roof, heating system, exterior walls and ceilings plus asbestos removal, handicapped access, support services, furniture, and fixtures.

Major renovations in the "A" wing include the gymnasium, technology, art and music areas; the auditorium; and offices. "B" wing improvements include a refurbished cafeteria, repainting, furniture replacement; an added faculty lounge; an expanded audio-visual and copy center; an added new cable television studio; and four new classrooms. "C" wing contains reconfigured classrooms, completely renovated rest rooms, and added storage areas, lab and classroom equipment, and cabinets.

—In conjunction with the Teachers Advisory Council, the Tewksbury Memorial High School Student Council will name four "students of the month" each month, using a different category each time as the basis for selection.

Nominations are open to all high school staff and students, with honorees chosen by a committee composed of two Student Council members, two faculty members, one administrator, and one parent.

In the "Community Involvement Category," the following students were selected: senior Terri Lightfoot, sophomore Melissa Lino, sophomore Timothy Roy, and senior Jill Truscello.

—Woburn's Wyman School celebrates the holidays each year with an increasingly popular "Christmas with Grandparents and Special Persons." This year, the event attracted 400 happy family members.

Traditionally, students, teachers, parents, and staff members present an "outstanding" hour-long program involving every student in the school - through songs, poems, brief skits, and laughter. This is followed by a "lavish spread" of refreshments, and classroom visits to meet the children's teachers.

--In a report to the School Committee on what she's been up to, Lynnfield High's half-time Pupil Adjustment Counselor Joan Robinson detailed the following - and several other - activities: short-term supportive counseling for students and family counseling, sometimes in conjunction with an outside counselor.

Last year, in her contact with 60 to 70 students, she worked in areas such as student concerns about relationships or academic schedules. This year, she is working with short-term groups dealing with seniors', learning, and drug and alcohol issues.

Among her many other activities, Robinson also chairs the Intervention Team, which is composed of the high school principal, assistant principal, nurse, school psychologist, Metco advisor, a teacher, and representatives from guidance and special education.

to course graduates, 14 years or older. Youngsters, ages 10-14, may participate and request a "Letter of Completion" to meet out-of-state licensing requirements.

Parental permission is required of all students under 18 years of age.

Each year state instructors and Massachusetts Environmental Police hold over 100 hunter education courses throughout the state. The state certificates issued at these classes serves two legal purposes. First, this card allows young men and women between 15 and 18 years old to hunt alone on their first Massachusetts hunting license. Secondly, the certificate is frequently necessary for either adults or minors to purchase a hunting license from other U.S. states and Canadian provinces.

All states in the northeast have such requirements, except for Massachusetts. Many experienced hunters participate to qualify for out-of-state licenses.

For additional information on courses, write Hunter Education, P.O. Box 408, Westminster, MA 01473 or call the program office at (508) 792-7434.

MOVIES

"Medicine Man" Short Takes

by Rochelle Flynn

"Medicine Man" staring Sean Connery, Lorraine Bracco. Directed by John McTinenan, Screenplay by Tom Schulman, Sally Robinson. Produced by Andrew G. Vajna, Donna Dubrow. Rated PG-13.

Miscasting and earnestness drain the pizzazz right out of "Medicine Man," a movie that takes itself all too seriously.

Sean Connery plays Dr. Campbell, an eccentric research scientist who has dug himself into the heart of the Amazon rain forest, where he claims he's found the cure for cancer. Only he's misplaced the formula. The serum he developed from the leaves of an exotic flower eradicated cancerous nodes in a local villager. But no mater how much he tries, Campbell can't duplicate that one amazing batch.

Enter Lorraine Bracco, a pushy, down-to-earth research scientist who shows up as his requested assistant. Trouble is, he's a chauvinist who requested a male assistant. Truth is, she's really there to see what he's doing with his research grants. Dr. Campbell, it seems, goes for years without checking in with the company that is funding him.

These two characters are supposed to be a politically correct odd couple, but to save both the world from cancer and the rain forest from the destructive hands of Brazilian developers. These are serious subjects that can bog down any film when not properly balanced with humor or romance. And after all, this is supposed to be escapism. But Connery and Bracco just don't mesh. The trouble stems from their characters as much as their performances.

Director John McTinenan has Connery playing his part as though he were an escapee from a bad sit-com. He's out in the jungle, swinging his golf clubs, insulting Bracco, drinking the local hootch to help chase away his ghosts. Bracco, on the other hand, is all humorless hard edges and an annoying, whiny temperament. These two opposites should work off each other. We expect laughs, a few sexual sparks. It just never happens.

The real star of this flick is the rain forest. McTiernan may have a problem with his actors, but he captures all the drama of his location. From the cascading remoteness of the waterfalls to glorious shots taken above the treetops, the jungle is a glistening, enigmatic paradise. McTiernan's eye captures the joy and the danger of this green wilderness. If only he could have captured that kind of emotional honesty in his characters, this film would have felt less like a lecture and more like entertainment.

Short Takes

Final Analysis is a glitzy soap opera featuring wicked sisters, a handsome, if gullible shrink and a bizarre murder mystery. Richard Gere, Kim Basinger and Uma Thurman make for an attractive, intriguing cast and director Phil Joanou arranges for plenty of atmosphere, but the plot is fairly ridiculous. Rated R. **

Fried Green Tomatoes spins a rich story about two strong women who buck the system and live their lives as they like, not as they are expected. The story is told through Jessica Tandy's flashbacks as she tries to point out to Kathy Bates that her life can be anything she wants, if she is willing to live it. The film's few flaws can be overlooked in favor of Mary Stuart Masterson's lively performance and a great storyline. Rated. PG-13.

Freejack is a science fiction thriller that is long, logy and riddled with plot holes. Emilio Estevez stars as a race car driver who is pulled into the future by a company that plans to meld another man's mind into his body. Estevez doesn't agree. Lot's of potential here, but that's about it. Rated R. *1/2

WHEN DR. CRANE (Lorraine Bracco, right) insinuates herself into Dr. Campbell's (Sean Connery) research camp, two scientific minds collide.

Love Crimes is an utterly ridiculous story about a prosecuting attorney (Sean Young) who goes after a con artist and sex offender (Patrick Bergin). She may, or may not, be psychologically scarred and she may, or may not, want to play Bergin's sex games. The story is salacious, makes little sense and has lousy production values. Rated R. *

The Hand that Rocks the Cradle is a shameless thriller that uses every trick in the book -- and makes them work. Rebecce De Mornay is the psycho nanny who hopes to do more than take care of the family she thinks ruined her. Creepy in a personal way, this shuddering escapism may rehash a tired theme, but it makes that theme cook. Rate R.  1/2

Rush tells the low life story of Texas narc officers who are not that far removed from the junkies they bust. Graphic, seamy and effectively moody, the film suffers from a slow-moving storyline and an excessively brooding performance from Jason Patric. Jennifer Jason Leigh is quite good as the naive cop who loses her innocence, and hates herself for it. Rated R. **

Bugsy tells the tale of Benjamin Siegel, the gangster who dreamt up Las Vegas. More the story of the man, not the mobster, this flick really has a great affinity for the charming, eccentric dreamer that was Siegel. Director Barry Levinson wisely made this a glitzy affair -- big in the old-fashioned sense of moviemaking. And yes, sparks really do fly between Warren Beatty and Annette Bening as the gangster and his main squeeze. Rated R. ***

JFK is Oliver Stone's intense version of what he believes to be the elaborate conspiracy behind the killing of John F. Kennedy. The theory alone is riveting, but coupled with Stone's innovative directing and some outstanding performances, this movie will leave you shuddering. You may have to remind yourself it's only a movie, only entertainment. Shave off points, however, for a ridiculously long and Capraesque courtroom scene used to tie up the loose ends. Rated R.  1/2

Prince of Tides is a searing account of abuse and healing, starring Nick Nolte as a Southerner who finds redemption in the office, and the arms, of a New York psychiatrist, Barbara Streisand, who plays the therapist and directed the movie, is guilty of some tired cliches, but the film is still extremely powerful and entertaining. Nolte gives the performance of his career. Rated R.  1/2

HELP STONE ZOO GET BACK ON ITS FEET.

Help reopen Stoneham Zoo in 1992

During the ongoing renovation project at Redstone Shopping Center and through to the grand reopening, The Mugar Group and Friends to Reopen Stone Zoo have joined forces to create a campaign to raise public awareness and funds for the reopening of Stone Zoo in 1992.

The campaign to "help Stone Zoo get back on its feet" will be launched in mid February. The coordination of the animal theme artwork will be displayed on murals and single panels which will be used to beautify areas of the shopping center as renovation work progresses.

"This campaign is structured for all the communities who enjoy the Stone Zoo and Redstone Shopping Center to get together and make a difference," said Bee Russo, Public Relations Coordinator for Friends to Reopen Stone Zoo. "In order to make this work, we need your help...we need to hear from public or private schools art classes, art schools, graphic designers, day care providers, scout groups, evening school students, church groups, individuals and groups of all ages who are interested in participating in this exciting project. We are searching for all levels of accomplishments from a wide range of talents and imagination," she continued.

Additionally, there is an opportunity for sponsorship participation of these individual projects.

Presently, there are 21 plywood cubes within Redstone Shopping Center. These cubes will be covered in a variety of animal theme artwork. The sponsorships available are: $500 sponsors five, four foot square panels; $100 sponsors one, four foot square panel; $50 sponsors one-half of a panel; $25 sponsors one-fourth of a panel; $10 will help in the creation of a banner that will be created by school students.

All sponsorships are tax deductible.

Sponsors and artists will be recognized within the Redstone Shopping Center in press releases as the work progresses and in the Friends to Reopen Stone Zoo newsletter, which is mailed to over 7,000 individuals, families, and businesses each month. Plus, all the artwork will be retained and, hopefully, used at Stone Zoo when it reopens.

"We plan on having this multi-community campaign ongoing throughout the renovation project and anticipate a grand reopening celebration in August," stated Andrea Lee of The Mugar Group. Presently, Artists, Inc., The Carousel School, Horace Mann School, and many more have started the ball rolling. Anyone interested in being involved should contact: Paulene (Bee) Russo, Public Relations Coordinator, Friends to Reopen Stone Zoo, 181 North Main St., Stoneham, MA 02180, 617-438-9488, 617-395-0050 or Andrea H. Lee, Tenant Coordinator, The Mugar Group Inc., Two Burlington Woods Dr., Burlington, MA 01803, 617-229-2111, 508-3283.

Participants as of February 12 are: Pride Printing; Artists, Inc.; The Carousel School; Eric Soller; Horace Mann School; Peter Pappas; Dorothea Souza; Susanne Zingesser; Gini Pineau; Berkley Typographers; Lisa Gauntlett; Lasergraphics.
